

LINGUISTIC SURVEY BY GRIERSON

Name of Institution : National Library | Year : 20th ce

The Linguistic Survey of India is a landmark study of the languages spoken across British India, documenting 364 languages and dialects. Initiated by the linguist and Indian Civil Service officer George Abraham Grierson, the survey was proposed following the Seventh International Oriental Congress held in Vienna in 1886. It remains one of the most comprehensive linguistic surveys ever undertaken in South Asia.
